NO. 7.

Washington, D. C. Oct. 3.— The Fifty-fourth Congress will meet two months from Monday and the Cap.tol s rapidly being prepared for it. There always a great housecleaning up on the hill between the sessions and still more between Congresses, as has been the case this summer. There will be new carpets and much new furniture in appropriate words is about as virile and the halls of the houses and the committee rooms, for it will be a new Congress which will meet on the first Monday in December. In personnel, especially in gress, thanks to the "tidei wave ' of last year which threw up on the Congresonal beach some very new things.

Like every "tidal wave" Congress : will have a number of new members who would never have been nominated if it had been thought that they were going to be elected The "forlorn hope" men who were given nominations which no one else would take, to the surprise of themselves and everybody else, were landed into Congressional seats and s.danes.

tions about Congress and everything else here by such intelligent people that when I return I do not know what to assume that my readers generally know about Washington, so that it may be ecessary to sav that of the 356 members of the next House 245 will be Reoublicans, 104 will be Democrats 6 will be Populists and I (Francis G. New lancs, the handsome and well dressed son-in law of the late Senator Sharon, who represents the whole State of Neva da, and incidentally looks after so much of the Sharon millions as he has invested in the suburbs of Washington and in Senator Stewart's American Bimetallic League and Silver Knights of America) s set down conspicuously as represent ing the silver party whatever that may

All this is according to the 'unofficial list" of the cierk of the House, which is practically official Besides these Repesentatives there will be four delegates rom Territories, the class steadily iminishing in numbers as the Territories become States, and before the coming Congress expires Utah's delegate will become a Representative with the right to vote as well as to speak which s the chief advantage of the Representawe over the Delegate best and Speaker Reed will need all the There never was any real question abou session of the House much more inter esting in every way than it would other wise be for it will give significence to emportance on the floor. The Republican policy is plainly 'indicated," as the physicians say to be one of masterly nactivity, but it will be diffigult to carry this out therefore the predictions that the session will be short that the Republicans will pass the appropriations hills and possibly some revenue raising Hawan and the emancipation of Cuba and then go bon e, are not linely to be

Besides he universally Republican majority in the House there is the Senate to reckon with with its nicely balanced parties, none having a majority rahty. The Senate cannot be sent home, even by Speaker Reed so that the first session of this Congress, like the probably be a long one. The Senate will be less interesting than the House, for Mr Allison, the foremost candidate will not be like Mr Reed in control, but, on the contrary, he will probably keep as quiet as possible unless he sees an opportunity to advance his cause by som

It is a waste of time and a loss to attempt to raise chicks in the winter with hens, unless one is willing to give the hens and brood extra care, which is too costly when but a few hens have broods. Ventilating the stable is a problem in the winter season. It is an easy matter to let plenty of fresh air come into the stable, but it is difficult to avoid cold draughts on the animals. No system of proper ventilation can be suggested, as Practical the plan of the stable, the direction of the wind and the mode of ventilation are to be considered. Much warmth is lost in winter by too much ventilation If the stable is not latticed and plastered, plenty of fresh air will find its way in. In fact, it will be more difficult to keep it out than to let it in.

When straw is sold off the farm there is a loss of fertility from the soil. It is estimated that the value of the substances in a ton of straw that are capable of supplying plant food is over $0; yet farmers will haul a ton of straw a mile or two to market and sell it for less than that sum; the return load being straw and manure from the stables. which possess but little more value than the clean straw bauled from the farm. Potatoes should be dug, well dried and stored in a cool, dark place, that is free from moisture. If exposed to damp ness, or allowed to become too warm they will sprout. They have been stored ir layers in dry oats or sand with advantage, and it would not be amiss if those having crops of potatoes would make some experiments in that direction. It is claimed that the large crop of potatoes this year will afford only a TOILET ARTICLES. small profit to growers. The fact is that this country has not produced a single bushel over the quantity necessary to supply the demand. The difficulty is that farmers have made no proper provision for storing the large crop, and are getting rid of them by shipping as many of them to market as possible, thus forcing prices down. After a while prices will be high, and those who made preparations for storing their potatoes will have no cause to regret the expense in curring in so doing.

There are four prominent mutton breeds of sheep, all of which may be distinguished by black or white faces-the Southdowns, Oxford Downs, Shropshire Downs and Hampshire Downs, the "down" being dropped from all but the Southdown. The Southdown is smaller in size than the others, but is considered superior in quality of flesh as well as bardiness and adaptability to scanty

It takes many years to realize from young walnut trees. but those who will plant them will leave fortunes for the next generations.

Take up the roots of cannas and danlias, wrap them in paper and keep them in a dry place. This is best done before the ground becomes too cold. Let them dry in a shady place, and do not injure them in any manner, as may happen by rough handling. ---Some farmers still have sufficient faith in sheep to pay high prices for the best, and they also get their reward. Verment breeders of merines, who have exported sheep to South Africa, have received as much as $500 for a single ram It is the quality and breed that make sheep pay. In receiving trees from the nursery to be planted in the orchard, according to the advice of Professor Faville, the Canadian orchardist and lecturer, they should be heeled in the soil for a few days before planting to revitalize them gradual-It is well to get rid of useless feaces.

But in many places where the fence is removed the soil is filled with rocks. bushes and trees so that it is impossible to plow or cultivate it. Such unused fence rows soon become as bad a nuisance as the useless fence that preceded them. It will pay, generally, to clear up such feace rows if only for the looks of the place. While the rows remain, showing that fences had once occupied that spot, their absence must indicate that farming in that neighborhood is less prosperous than it used to be.

If you are feeding any stock with the idea of making a profitable gain of flesh, see to it that they are well protected from storms and cold in the approaching months of winter. You cannot feed them profitably otherwise. Nothing in the whole system of stock management has been more thoroughly proved than When coin is cut green, as it always should be, it should be set in rather small stooks, so as to allow the wind to go through them. Especial care should be taken to have the stooks evenly balanced around the supporting hill and to have it well bound at the top. Much of the value both of grain and fodder is lost by putting it up poorly, leaving the stalks to fall down and be soaked with rain and mud. Preserving milk will greatly add to its value and lessen the risks from its use. The bacteria can be destroyed by boiling, but boiling the milk injuries its flavor. It has been found that a current of electricity through the milk for a certain time will destroy the bacteria and do no injury to the flavor. Further experiments are now being made in that direc-

time to trim the trees, because more labor can be then given than when the work is deferred to the early portion of the year, as attention is then required in other departments. Most fruit growers prefer to prame in the spring, owing to the liability of winter killing, which may compel them to cut back again in the spring after the work has been done in the late fall, but it is seldom that such a thing happens to well-grown trees. The trimming off of the limbs of apple trees is done in a very improper manner by farmers who do not give much of their attention to the orchards. They go in with a saw and take off some of the limbs, often not covering the stump with out too far, thus getting rid of useless wood and also inducing growth of new lone in winter, when the ground is frozen, the old wood being cut out at he same time, though to escape winter killing the work is sometimes postponed until spring. The danger is that the work is liable to be done too late. It is frequent occurrence that grapevines
